

On Parker Pond, Mount Vernon, Maine

A Natural History Week at Bearnstow

June 18–22 and July 2, 2018

Lecture Presentations and Nature Walks by Visiting Naturalists

Morning Lectures (10:30 a.m.) / Afternoon Nature Walks (1:30 p.m.)

Admission free. Call 207-293-2280 for reservations after June 15.

Monday, June 18

Nicole Rogers, Rubenstein School of the Environment and Natural Resources
University of Vermont, Burlington

“Maine Forests: Past, Present and Future” — www.bearnstow.org/rogers.pdf

Tuesday, June 19

Eric Jones, Assistant Professor of Plant Biology, University of Maine, Machias

“Plant Mating Systems and Strategies” — www.bearnstow.org/jones.pdf

Wednesday, June 20

Kalyn Bickerman-Martens, Ecology and Environmental Sciences, University of Maine, Orino

“Maine’s Native Bumble Bees” — <http://www.bearnstow.org/martens.pdf>

Thursday, June 21:

Dan Miller, Northeast Climate Science Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

“Climate Change: A Long-term Perspective from Lakes” — www.bearnstow.org/miller.pdf

Friday, June 22:

Kevin Doran, Natural Science Educator, Maine Forest Service

“Maine Woods: Finding the Right Balance” — www.bearnstow.org/doran.pdf

Monday, July 2.

Alene Onion, Invertebrate Biologist, New York State Department of Environmental Conservation

“Parker Pond’s Animals Without Backbones” — www.bearnstow.org/onion.pdf

See also www.bearnstow.org/natureweek.htm